

Application for Recognition
Excellence in Empowering Students in Service Programs
Application Deadline February 8, 2010

With our 2010 Award, CSEE wants to hear from schools that are teaching students valuable skills by involving them in service programs in ways that go beyond just the "work" itself. Are your students responsible for planning, implementing, evaluating, or otherwise helping these programs to succeed? Tell us how they are involved, and how involved they are!

School Information

Service Program Information

Circle the grades involved in your service program: 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 11 12

Please provide a brief description of the program (mandatory, volunteer, hours or project based, percent of service in/out of curriculum, etc.) _____

Name of Service Director _____

Phone (_____) _____ Email address _____

Is your position?: _____ voluntary _____ full-time _____ part time

In addition to the application, please submit a formal response from the Community Service Director or teacher in charge of service, addressing the focus of this year's awards: the ways students play meaningful roles in community service projects beyond the work itself. It will be helpful to know both the kinds of jobs students are involved in, and the numbers of students that are involved in these jobs. (There is no expectation that nearly as many students are involved in these jobs as in the service itself, and yet research on effective community service programs indicates that the more students are involved in their service programs, the more good it does both them and the school.)

Include any supporting documentation you would like to share (note: please send copies, as we will not be able to return these): course syllabi, newspaper clippings, letters or materials from agencies/organizations where service is performed, student publicity, photos, etc.
